Troubleshooting MaintenanceX installation blocked To fix Google Play Store download waiting error: Check frequently for downloads and updates Google Play Store download waiting error means that other apps are updating at the same time. This issue can occur if you download multiple apps at the same time. To resolve this issue: Go to Google Play > App & Device Management > Manage. You'll see which apps are being updated or downloaded. Click the X next to the app name to cancel the download and continue downloading the app you want to download. Checking your connection should always be one of your first steps. If you are using Wi-Fi, open a website on your computer or check your internet speed. If the internet speed is good but the download is slow, restart your modem and device. Also, make sure you have data enabled: in the Google Play store, tap the menu button (three lines) in the top left corner. Go to settings". In the app download settings, select "Over any network". If the download proceeds normally, your home or office network is to blame. Reboot your modem and if all else fails, contact your ISP. Check your memory and SD card. Frequent Google Play issues are caused by insufficient memory on your phone or SD card. Normally, you'll get a notification when your mobile device runs out of free space. However, to make sure that your storage space doesn't delay downloads: go to Settings > Storage and check how much you have free space. Free up space by uninstalling apps you don't use or deleting old photos and videos that you have backed up elsewhere. Try downloading the app again. Restart your device. If you are not downloading any other apps, you have a fast connection and enough space, restart your device, download apps through the browser instead you can try to work around the pending download issue by downloading the app directly from your mobile or desktop browser. Visit Google website and sign in with your Google account. Type MaintenanceX in the search bar and follow the download instructions. Clear cache and data of Google Play apps. Go to Settings > Apps. Click on "Google Play Store". Click Storage. Make sure Google Play is closed. This can be frustrating as it prevents you from downloading your favorite app or game on your Android device. But we are here to help! In this guide, we will walk you through some solutions to help you fix Google Pending download from Play Store error. With that said, let's get straight to the point. Why does the download from Play Store get stuck? One of the most common reasons why Play Store downloads get stuck waiting to download is that you may be updating too many apps at once. There is no single reason for the error "Waiting for download from Play Store". For some, the problem may appear due to the application download settings or lack of memory on the phone. Netflix is waiting to be downloaded. Screenshot: Sagar Naresh/Gotechtor Others encounter the error "Waiting for download from Play Store" due to internet connection issues, incomplete Google account setup, older Android firmware or Play Store version. Now that you have an idea of what might be causing this error, let's take a look at the fixes. 1. Check app download settings. If you don't install an app and the Google Play Store shows a pending download message, it may be related to the app's download settings. In the Play Store settings menu there is an option to set app download options. This gives you the option to set up Wi-Fi, cellular data, or both to download apps or games. If you change this setting, your phone may display a download error message when you try to download an app. Here's how to change the app's download settings. 1. Open Play Store and tap your profile picture. 2. Then select "Settings" from the drop-down menu. Android settings option. Sagar Naresh/Gotechtor 3. Click Network Settings and then select Application Download Settings. Android network settings. Sagar Naresh/Gotechtor 4. Select Via any network from the list. Then press DONE to confirm your choice. Android app download settings. Sagar Naresh/Gotechtor After completing the above steps, check if you can download apps or games without any problems. 2. Check your internet connection. As mentioned earlier, internet connection issues can be the reason why Google Play won't download your app or game. If you don't see an internet connection in the Google Play Store, make sure your phone has a stable internet connection. Even better, switch to a Wi-Fi connection instead of a cellular data connection and see if that solves the problem or not. If you have a reliable internet connection, corrupted temporary or cached data can prevent the app from working properly. When an app crashes or stops responding, it's best to clear its cache. This gives the app a fresh start and may help resolve some temporary issues. Here's how: 1. Open the Settings app on your phone, tap Apps & notifications, then tap Show all X apps. List of applications for Android. Sagar Naresh/Gotechtor 2. Scroll down and select Google Play Store. Google Play Store app. Sagar Naresh/Gotechtor 3. Click Storage & Cache and then Clear Data or Clear Storage. Clear memory and cache on Android. Sagar Naresh/Gotechtor Reopen the Play Store and try downloading the app or game again. 4. Check your phone's storage space Another reason why the Google Play Store is stuck waiting to download is that you don't have enough space on your Android device. When you try to download an app or game, your phone will warn you that there is not enough disk space. However, you can check it manually.storage on your device, go to Settings > Storage. Free up space on your Android device. Screenshot: Sagar Naresh/Gotechtor Here you can uninstall unused apps and delete old photos or videos. You can also back up unwanted photos and videos to your computer and delete them from your phone, etc. to free up space. Once that's done, try downloading the app or game from the Play Store again and see if that fixes the problem. 5. Stopping further downloads If further downloads or updates are in progress, you may receive an error message while waiting to download from the Google Play Store. In this case, cancel future downloads. 1. On your phone, open the Google Play Store, tap your profile picture, and select My apps and games. Manage apps and devices on Android. Sagar Naresh/Gotechtor 2. On the Overview tab, click View Details. See Android app details. Sagar Naresh/Gotechtor 3. Now you have to click on the Cancel All button at the top right corner to reject all downloads. Cancel pending downloads on Android. Sagar Naresh/Gotechtor Once that's done, try downloading the app or game you're having issues with again and see if that fixes the problem. 6. Turn off VPN on your Android device A VPN or virtual proxy network allows you to stay anonymous online. Many people use VPN software to access region-blocked content. VPNs can often cause unconfirmed Play Store download issues due to server issues or app bugs. So go ahead and disable the VPN app on your Android phone and then try to download the app or game from the Play Store. If your phone's date and time are incorrect, it can cause many problems with your phone, including the "Waiting for download from Play Store" error. So make sure your phone is setting the correct time and date based on your location. Here's how to check if the date and time are set correctly on your Android device. 1. Open the Settings app and go to System. AndroidSettings. Sagar Naresh/Gotechtor 2. Select Date & Time. Android date and time settings. Sagar Naresh/Gotechtor 3. Here you can set the date and time manually. However, it is recommended to activate the Use network time and Use network time zone switches. Android network time settings. Sagar Naresh/Gotechtor 8. Downloading the application through the browser If none of the above methods helped you, you can try to download the application to your computer through the browser of your choice. Just open the Google Play Store in your browser and search for the app or game you want to install. Click the Install button and select your current device to install the app. Install the application/game on your computer via a browser. Screenshot: Sagar Naresh/Gotechtor Latest thoughts on the Play Store Download in progress Well, done. I hope the above solutions should help you solve the problem of downloading from Play Store. If none of these fixes helped to resolve the issue, remove and then add your Google account and try downloading the app from the Play Store again. Let us know in the comments below if you have any questions or another method that solved the problem. Waiting to download from the Play Store is one of the problems you may encounter when installing new apps from the Google Play Store on your Android device. When an error occurs, the phone will not download any new apps. Anything you try to download will stay pending no matter what you do. It's really frustrating not being able to install apps from the Play Store, especially since it's the only source of trusted app downloads for Android devices. If you are also facing this problem, there are several methods you can try and see if they help you solve the problem. A Canceling ongoing downloads or updates One of the possible reasons why Play Store downloads top on your downloads is that many of them are already running on your device. To fix it, you can disable hand updates for any apps you don't need urgently, then download the app you really want to install. Launch the Google Play Store on your device. Click on the three horizontal lines in the upper left corner. On the next screen, select "My apps and games". If you see apps or games that are currently updating, cancel their processes by clicking the X next to them. Download using mobile data if Wi-Fi is not working As downloading applications requires an internet connection, make sure that your internet connection is working. If you are using a Wi-Fi network that has stopped working for some reason, you can change your internet source to mobile data to download apps. Turn off Wi-Fi and turn on mobile data on your phone. Open the Google Play Store on your phone. Click on the three horizontal lines in the upper left corner and select "Settings". On the next screen, select the app download options. Enable over any network and click Done. Try downloading the app from the store, it should work. Disable the VPN app on your device. A VPN app can also cause the Play Store pending download issue. Because a VPN basically spoofs your location, the Google Play Store may think you're not in the country your device should be in and stop the download. In this case, you don't have to do much to solve the problem. All you need to do is disable the VPN app on your phone and you'll be fine. The steps to disable VPN vary depending on the app you are using. However, most applications have a large button in the main interface that allows you to turn the service on and off. You want to disable it to solve the problem with the Play Store. Deleting Play Store data Like other apps on your device, the Play Store app stores its configurations and settings in temporary files on your device. Sometimes these files can cause problems in the store. To fix this, simply delete the Play Store app files and you're good to go Launch the Settings app on your device. Tap Apps & notifications. Locate the Google Play Store app and tap on it. To delete files, select Clear storage. Select Clear Cache to clear cache files. Uninstalling Play Store Updates If the Play Store waiting for download issue only started appearing after a recent Play Store update, the update may be to blame. Luckily, your device allows you to undo these updates and that should fix the problem. On your device, open the Settings app, tap Apps & Notifications, and select the Google Play Store app. Tap the three dots in the top right corner of the screen and select Uninstall updates. A prompt will appear on the screen. Tap OK to continue. Free up storage space on your phone Each new application that you download to your device requires a certain amount of storage space. If your phone is running low on storage, you need to clear some storage before downloading apps. Insufficient storage space can lead to download problems in Play Store. Open the Settings app on your phone. Click Storage to view storage information. This will let you know what and how much space is being used. Delete items you no longer need to make room for new apps. Reset application preferences If you install an application that can open certain file types, you can set it as the default application for that file format on your device. While it's not directly related to the pending download issue, it's worth clearing the settings for that app and see if that helps. You can always set an app as the default file opener, even if the settings are reset. Run the settings on your phone. Tap Apps & notifications. Tap the three dots in the top right corner and choose Reset app preferences. Factory reset your device if nothing works and you still have trouble downloading from Play Store on your phone, the last resort is to factory reset your phone. This will delete all configurations, settings, data and allow you to restart your phone. Make a backup copy of the necessary files before erasing data from the device. Open the Settings app. Click System at the bottom. Select "Erase all data" (factory reset). Follow the on-screen instructions to factory reset your device. Have you ever had problems with the Google Play Store that prevented you from downloading new apps on your Android device? If yes, what did you do to fix it? We look forward to your response in the comments below.
